MARKET:
Future land use plans often designate more land to commercial development than is required to serve the needs of the communities’ future population.

In fact, historical trends suggest we will see more residential and less commercial and industrial development than shown in community plans.